

American European Insurance Group, Inc. ("AEIG") Introduces Equipment Breakdown Coverage For Commercial Property

May 1, 2008

American European Insurance Group, Inc. ("AEIG") announced today it is now offering a new coverage to protect your commercial property against losses arising from equipment breakdown.

Property insurance was not designed to cover the unique causes of loss that can damage equipment, such as power surges, electrical arcing, mechanical failure, motor burnout and operator error. These causes could knock out your refrigeration system, air conditioning, cash registers, or computers. That is why you need Equipment Breakdown Coverage to supplement your property insurance.

Unlike warranties and typical service contracts, which provide only limited coverage for a specific piece of equipment, AEIG's Equipment Breakdown insurance can cover a wide range of basic equipment, including central air conditioning, ventilation systems and fans, boilers and water heaters, furnaces, heat pumps, heaters, solar heaters, deep well pumps, back-up generators, chair lifts and elevators, electrical power panels, pool equipment and central vacuum systems.

American European Insurance Group, Inc. ("AEIG") is offering Equipment Breakdown coverage for commercial property accounts through The Hartford Steam Boiler Inspection and Insurance Company ("HSB"), one of the world's leading providers of equipment breakdown coverage for business, industry and institutions.
